1. FAIR e'en as thou is yonder light Which streaks the morning's coming dawn And casts its mild and shadowy ray Upon the hill-side and the lawn, As if to ask the reason, why It should not meet your youthful eye.

See those proud oaks upon the hills-The monarchs of the woody land-The cedar, maple, and the bay-The younger members of the band, Seem all a mass of burnished gold Set in the mountain's ample fold. III.

Who would recline on beds of ease, And sleep away morn's precious hour, Instead of wand'ring forth to see The opening of the day-light flower, And greet a scene so bright as this, And woo the sun, to steal a kiss? Poughkeepsie, April, 1842.

The Whig Internal Improvement Policy,

LOCO-FOCOISM. REMARKS OF MR. FURMAN On the Resolution relative to the Importance of an Immediate Presecution of the Works of Internal Improvement in this State. [Reported for The Albany Evening Journal.]

I have adverted alone to the ancient Babylon, because it showed at once the immense benefits resulting from the construction of such works, and the serious evils, nay destruction itself, that fol-Towed their neglect and ruin. But, sir, the same policy marked the progress of all the other enlightened nations of the olden time, in the construction of canals and roads, in Egypt, Greece and Rome; and the mountain ridges in many parts of Greece now exhibit to us in mountain passes, where a horse or mule can at this day with difficulty find a track, regularly constructed "Tram roads," as they are termed by engineers, a supposed modera invention, to overcome the difficulties of steep ascents and descents with heavy loads. And the same system has been pursued to this moment by the more important nations of Europe-proving to us that upon whatever other points people may have differed in opinion, all the enlightened nations of all ages of the world have agreed upon the importance and necessity of fostering and encouraging a system of internal improvements.

That system—that glorious system—has been introduced into our country; and although at first it was considered a "wild and foolish project," to construct the Erie Canal, and the proposition for its survey in 1808 only acceded to on the ground that "it could do no harm, and might do some good," it became adopted here, and resulted in the construction of the Erie and Champlain canals, which have built up and enriched our State.

That any harm resulted from the adoption of that system cannot, I believe, be contended for by any, even of its most rigid opponents; and to por tray the good that was the effect of its prosecu tion is beyond the power of the most vivid imagination.

In the summer of 1811, when Gov. De Witt Clinton made a tour through this State, on the present route of the Erie Canal, the country was generally a wilderness, and there was not a single house where the city of Rochester now stands. And in the autumn of 1820, the year in which the middle, and first constructed section of that canal was opened for navigation, the Canal pierced a wild and desolate region at Rome only to emerge from it at Salina. It was covered with a deep forest, and for a large portion of the distance the advancing settlers had avoided that country as unfit for cultivation. But the opening of the Canal not only afforded a means of transportation between distant points, but also drained the marshes and swamps, and caused the forests to be cleared, and now its banks, instead of the gloomy shades which formerly covered that extensive re gion for miles upon miles, refresh the sight with the prospect of thriving cities and villages, and a well settled land smiling under the hand of the industrious husbandman; and it has made that whole western country the pride and glory of our

It is not the West alone, Mr. President, that has been benefitted and enriched by that great work, and by the prosecution of that system. To it the city of New-York owes millions of her great wealth; and is in fact more indebted for her growth and importance among the cities of the Union, to the prosecution of our Internal Improvements than to all the foreign commerce she ever enjoyed. And if her eyes could be opened to her own interests, her citizens would be clamorous at the doors of your legislative halls for the completion of your public works.

So much do we owe to the Internal Improvement system. What may be derived from the continuation of that system, remains for the future to develope. But this I will say-no man, however sanguine may be his anticipations, can predict any thing but what will fall far short of the reality fifteen or twenty years hence. How shall we carry on those Internal improve ments? We are told by our opponents that it is useless to talk about prosecuting our public works, that we cannot raise a dollar of money-and that the State is now almost hopelessly in debt. Sir, I wish the people of this State to understand one thing, and that is, that while the Whigs were in power there was no difficulty in raising money .-And had they continued at the helm of Government, the public works would have been prosecuted until this moment, and the laborers upon those works would have been paid. And yet when our opponents came into our seats, they were scarcely warm there before they told us that they could not obtain the necessary funds and that the work must stop. Twelve millions had been contracted for the enlargement of the Erie Canal before the Whigs came into power. Ten millions of that amount has been paid Of that ten millions, the Whigs paid eight millions five hundred thousand dollars. One million was paid by our opponents before we came into effice, and we left them but half a million to provide for, when they again succeeded us. And yet their very first act was to declare their utter inability to pay even that small amount.

Sir, if British ministers had come into the English House of Commons and informed them that they could not carry on the Government, they would have been instantly told to give up their seats and let others come in who could de it. If you displaced those who could carry on the Government successfully, and you cannot carry out the policy so necessary for the well-being of the State, retire, and again let the Whigs come back and take the helm of power. Such would have been the answer in any Government except this.

Sir, I declare boldly that there has never been a moment since our opponents came into power, that all the money requisite for the procecution of our works could not be obtained for seven per cent .-But, sir, how can they even hope to get it? They, who are continually talking about the necessity of repudiation, and not paying the State debts-will capitalists lend their money to them? No, sirif the rate of interest was but six or even five per cent. they could not borrow even a single million of dollars.

J. Horsley Palmer, the late Governor of the Bank of England, after having taken a recent tour through this State, expressed his surprise that any one should talk of the debt of New-York. It was nothing in comparison with her immense resources. He said that we had only to say to the capitalists of Europe that we would pay the debt forty, fifty, or sixty years hence, and the money could every day by Senators opposed to us on this floor. And this is not only his opinion, but that of every other intelligent man who travels through our country. And it is a matter of surprise to all of country. And it is a matter of surprise to all of them that any thinking man can be found to raise a great outry about a debt of $20,000,000.—

Why rive a debt of $50,000,000 is not as much to preach again, but who, from the use of your medicine, is so far restored as not only to be able to was out, but also Why, sir, a debt of $50,000,000 is not as much to this State now as our debt of $7,000,000 was when the Erie Canal was originally constructed. We were less able to pay $7,000,000 when the first shovel was struck in the construction of that Canal than we are now to pay $50,000,000. I say Why, sir, a debt of $50,000,000 is not as much to so on the assertion of eminent financiers, and from my own knowledge of the increased wealth of this

If Senators on the other side, are indeed the friends of the system of Internal Improvements, and I have mistaken their course and their policy. I can only say that I shall be gratified, highly gratined in being thus mistaken-and I trust they wil convince me of my error by their acts. Let them come up to the work, and stand shoulder to shoulder with us. Let them declare boldly to the world that whetever other States may do or say, New-York will always pay her debts. Repeal your law suspending the prosecution of the Public Works—issue 6 or 7 per cent stock—send an agent to Europe who will inform capitalists there of the true condition of New-York-of her vas resources-and you will find money in plenty to carry on your public works to completion, beyond a peradventure. Capitalists in England new loan their money at four per cent .- in Holland at three per cent .- and think that a fair interest for their investments .-How can it be, then, that the great State of New-York cannot get a loan at six or seven per cent. ? There can be no other reason than that they want confidence in those who ask for the loan. Give bem that confidence, then. Show them the entire ability of New-York to meet her engagements, and that she is not only able, but that she will pay her debts whatever may come, and they will press their money upon you-they will urge us to take loans from them. Then may you carry on your Public Works-then may you continue your system of Internal Improvement, which has conferred so great benefits upon the people of this State

I expect, Mr. President, to have the principles I have assumed contested. I expected to hear the Whig policy of progress in our Improvement Sysem denounced as erroneous and wild. In rela tion to that I have only to remark that there is not a single source of human happiness against which kere have not been uttered the most sorrowful predictions. Turnpike roads and Canals were each in their time to be the ruin of the land. All ecollect, or have read of the misery that was prophesied would be brought upon this State by the original construction of the Erie Canal, and all see its fulfilment in the desert laughing joyously unler the bending harvest. And now at this day our ears are dinned with the cry of intolerable taxaion and deplorable misery to arise from the cause of our Internal Improvements; an apprehension more wild and visionary than any ever formed by the most sanguise friend of our Improvement sysem. Our Railroads and Canals, which add to he wealth of the community, and build up our cities and towns, are to be the causes of our great fistress. But so it has always been from the most listant periods. Inoculation, that means through Providence of ridding our land of one of the most 'ell plagues that ever tormented mankind, was desounced as a work of the great enemy of the human-race; The use of hops was also declared to be poisonous-and in truth there has never been my thing that became of general good to the vorld, that was not railed against in the most biter terms, on its introduction and progress to completion.

As was well remarked by Sydney Smith-there ire always a set of worthy and moderately gifted nen, who bawl out death and ruin upon every vaitable change which the varying aspect of human offairs absolutely and imperiously requires. And it would be extremely useful to make a collection of the hatred and abuse that all these changes have experienced, which are now admitted to be marked improvements in our condition. We have one consolation, Mr. President, and that is, if our opponents, in carrying out the principles of then party, still refuse to progress with the Public Works, and persist in allowing them to go to ruin, and the people lose the benefit which they might reasonably expect to derive from the millions already expended, the time will be but short before the patience and long suffering of that people will be taxed to its utmost, and they will arise in their might, and by displacing our opponents, remove the only obstacles in the way of a vigorous prosecution of their great system of Public Improvements.

And let me say, Mr. President, that it is time, full time, that the people were looking at our situation, unless they intend to allow themselves to be deprived of the advantages to result from the great expenditures already made. I do not use too strong language when I say, we shall be ruined if we remain much longer in the condition of supineness and inactivity we are at present. Great Britain is pushing on her public works in the Canadas regardless of expense, and designs, it possible, to wrest from us, a large portion of the Western trade, which we have heretofore considered our due, and of the tolls to which we must to a great extent look for a remuneration of our extended outlays; and if that trade once becomes diverted from us, as it assuredly will be if our works remain unfinished and imperfect, we shall find great difficulty in regaining it. Our only course is to finish at once our enlarged canal, and by that means (as all know who understand any thing about the course of trade) induce transportation on it, and thus increase the annual receipts on our public works and enable us to discharge our debts and construct other works in other parts of the State. For us to pursue the policy indicated by our opponents is suicidal in the extreme-to wait. as they tell us, until the increase of our tolls from the works in their present state enable us to complete them, is an utter absurdity; for the impediments thrown in the way of traffic by the unfinished state of our canal and the frequent breaches that will occur in the old part of it, will prevent that income from ever increasing. We shall on the contrary become worse off every year that we continue in our present state. If the policy that our epponents now recommend with so much perseverance had been adopted in this State in 1820, when the first section of the Erie Canal was finished and navigated, the original canal would not have been constructed to this day, and this State would now have been in debt near fifteen millions of dollars without any revenue to meet its liquidation. For our general fund, of which so much has been said, even if the same had been put out at interest and nothing deducted but the annual expenses of the government of the State, and not a penny for internal improvements, would have been state from her Internal Improvements. This State is abundantly able to complete all her public works now. She need not wait ten years. Every year—every month of delay adds greatly to the ultimate cost of their completion.

Do the majority of this Legislature expect that all the contractors on our public works will stop—discharge their men and let their mackinery and materials, already prepared and furnished, go to ruin, and not pay them for the loss they have incurred through their acts? Mr. President, they will soon find that it will cost more to ruin the Internal Improvement policy of this State, than it would to carry it out.
